

Peace Corps Opportunities

Casey Woodling was a Peace Corps volunteer in Madagascar from 2007 to 2009. He and his wife served together in the rural village of Ambatofinandrahana, teaching English to children and adults, training teachers, and developing curriculum to help local teachers. He will share about his experiences in Madagascar, his application process, and how his Peace Corps experience has affected him professionally and personally. Woodling has taught philosophy courses at Coastal Carolina since 2013 and is the director of academic outreach and continuing education.
