Special Documentary Screening

“Black Women in Medicine”

Saturday, March 18th
8:30 AM

Brittain Hall BRTH Room 112
125 Chanticleer West, Coastal Carolina University, Conway, SC

Currently, 5% of physicians are Black, and less than 2% are Black women. This documentary examines this situation as it explores the lives of African-American women physicians who work diligently in all facets of medicine. In telling the stories of women who have persevered in medical fields in part by overcoming barriers linked to race and gender, the film provides audiences with under-represented visions of success and fuel for self-actualization. “Black Women in Medicine” is the first documentary to explore the history, contemporary issues, and the changing face of medicine. It features diverse voices and intimate untold stories of what it means to be a Black woman doctor in America. Celebrating the universal triumph of the human spirit.

Special Thanks
